

Contents

1	Changing from Financial Control to Financial Management in the Public Sector: An Introduction to the Changes That Will Be Required	1
1.1	The Aim of and Audience for This Guide	1
1.2	Why Is Management Relevant and Important?	4
1.2.1	Management	8
1.2.2	Leadership and Organisational Culture	11
1.3	Key Terms and Facets of PFM/IC Reform	15
1.3.1	The Budget	15
1.3.2	Cash Management	16
1.3.3	Management Accounting	17
1.3.4	Control	18
1.3.5	External and Internal Control	19
1.4	Implementing Reform from a Management Perspective	22
1.4.1	Longer Term Public Financial Management	25
1.4.2	Ownership of the PFM/IC Reform and Stability in the Reform Process	27
1.4.3	Corporate Governance (or ‘Good Governance’)	28
1.4.4	The Timing of the Reform	30
1.5	Applying This Reform	32
1.5.1	The Practical Consequences of the PFM/IC Reform	32
1.5.2	How Will the Existing Political and Operational Management React in Practice to Advanced Public Financial Management Reforms?	35
1.6	Individual Governments and This Reform	36

1.7	Structure of This Guide	38
1.8	Summary	38
Annex 1		39
	Likely Consequences of the Reform	39
2	Implementing Public Financial Management and Internal Control (PFM/IC)	47
2.1	The Context for Public Financial Management and Internal Control (PFM/IC)	47
2.2	Implementing PFM/IC Reform	50
2.3	Who Is the Manager?	51
2.4	Efficiency and Effectiveness and PFM/IC Reform—Why Countries Should Want to Introduce the Reform	53
	2.4.1 Securing Efficiency and Effectiveness	53
	2.4.2 The Role of the Operational Manager in Achieving Efficiency and Effectiveness	54
2.5	Defining ‘Sound Financial Management’	55
	2.5.1 Sound Financial Management	55
	2.5.2 Financial Control	57
	2.5.3 Cost Drivers and Cost Centres	57
2.6	Appreciating the ‘Management’ in Public Financial Management	59
	2.6.1 The Professionalisation of ‘Management’	59
	2.6.2 Challenges to Professionalising Management	61
	2.6.3 Management Structures and Delegation	63
2.7	Internal Control and Management	64
2.8	The Ministry of Finance and Its Controls	66
2.9	Second-Level Organisations	68
2.10	The Head of Finance	70
2.11	The Time Horizon for Decision Making Under PFM/IC	70
2.12	Effective Public Financial Management and the Information Requirements	73
2.13	Achieving the Benefits of PFM/IC	74
	2.13.1 Management and the Benefits of the Reform	74
	2.13.2 Integrating PFM/IC Reform with Managerial Reform	75
	2.13.3 Promoting Financial Literacy and Awareness	76
	2.13.4 Engaging a Wider Set of Actors in Financial Decision Making	77
2.14	Learning Lessons from the Experience of Countries Aiming to Introduce PFM/IC	77

2.15	PFM/IC and Delegation	79
2.16	PFM/IC and Decentralisation	81
2.17	Summary	81
3	The Distinction Between Public Financial Management and Internal Control (PFM/IC) and Public Financial Administration and Internal Control (PFA/IC)	85
3.1	Public Financial Administration and Internal Control (PFA/IC)	85
3.1.1	Control Prior to the Adoption of PFM/IC	85
3.1.2	The Control Environment	86
3.1.3	Limitations of PFA/IC	92
3.2	Comparing PFM/IC and PFA/IC	93
3.2.1	An Overview of the Comparison	93
3.2.2	The Objectives of Control	95
3.2.3	Budgetary Control	98
3.2.4	Development of Budgets	100
3.2.5	Parliamentary Scrutiny	103
3.2.6	Internal and External Audit	104
3.2.7	Consequential Features of PFM/IC That Do Not Exist with PFA/IC	105
3.3	Summary	106
	Annex: A Detailed Comparison of PFA/IC and PFM/IC	106
4	The Practical Steps for Initiating a Successful PFM/IC Reform	119
4.1	This Is a Management Reform!	119
4.1.1	The Managerial Impact	119
4.1.2	The Benefits of the PFM/IC Reform	123
4.1.3	Control	124
4.1.4	The Timetable for the Reform and the Role of Parliament	125
4.1.5	The Tests That Can Be Applied to Assess the Feasibility of the Reform	127
4.2	How Is the PFM/IC Reform to Be Undertaken?	140
4.2.1	Who Should Be Responsible for the Development of the PFM/IC Reform Policy, Its Application and Local Ownership of the Reform	140
4.2.2	Achieving Local Ownership	142
4.2.3	The Role of Parliament	143

	4.2.4	The Basic Elements of This Reform Recognising That This Is an Ongoing Reform	144
4.3		Will Delegation of Operational Management to the Civil or Local Government Service Cause Politicians to Lose Control?	150
4.4		How Should the Reform Be Applied Across the Public Sector?	154
4.5		Establishing a 'Driving Force for Change' Within a Ministry of Finance	156
4.6		Summary	157
5		The Responsibilities of the Minister of Finance, the State Secretary, and the Ministry in the Development of a PFM/IC Policy	159
5.1		The Responsibilities of a Minister of Finance and Senior Officials	160
	5.1.1	The Minister of Finance and PFM/IC	161
5.2		Before the Reform!	162
	5.2.1	The Initial Assessment	163
	5.2.2	The Appropriateness of the Decision to Introduce PFM/IC	164
	5.2.3	A Critical Issue for a Minister of Finance	166
	5.2.4	The Benefits and Costs of the Reform	168
	5.2.5	The Ministry of Finance and the Finance Function Within Line Ministries and Local Governments	169
	5.2.6	How the Minister of Finance Should Regard PFM/IC	173
	5.2.7	Coordination with the Different Ministry of Finance Technical Departments	174
	5.2.8	The Minister of Finance and Other Ministers	175
	5.2.9	The Minister of Finance and Parliament	177
5.3		During the Reform!	178
	5.3.1	Establishing the Appropriate Organisational Structures to Apply the Reform	178
	5.3.2	Cooperation with the Ministry or Department Responsible for Public Administration or Civil Service Reform	179
	5.3.3	The Use of Performance Information	179

5.3.4	The Organisation of Financial Information for Management Purposes	182
5.3.5	Internal Control Arrangements Within Line Ministries and Local Governments	184
5.3.6	PFM/IC and Budgetary Control	185
5.3.7	PFM/IC and the Quality of Public Expenditure	188
5.3.8	The Impact of PFM/IC on the Control of Second-Level Bodies Such as Agencies and State-Owned Enterprises	189
5.3.9	PFM/IC: Securing the Managerial and Technical Capacity: Advice and Training	191
5.3.10	Encouraging Managerial Initiative: A Need to Review Penalty and Inspection Arrangements	192
5.3.11	Financial Regulations and Other Advice to Be Issued by the Minister of Finance	194
5.4	Sustaining the Reform	195
5.4.1	The Minister of Finance and the Timescale for Application	195
5.4.2	The Need for a Consistency of Approach over Time and for Consensus Between Different Strands of Political Opinion	196
5.4.3	The Ministry of Finance and Annual Arrangements for the Review of the Impact of PFM/IC	196
5.5	Summary	197
	Annex	200
6	Risks and Unintended Consequences of the Reform	203
6.1	The Background to Risk and Unintended Consequences	203
6.1.1	Definitions	203
6.1.2	Causes of Unintended Consequences	204
6.1.3	Reducing the Potential for Risks and Unintended Consequences	207
6.1.4	Protecting Against Risks and Unintended Consequences, Including a Role for Internal and External Audit	208
6.2	Examples of Unintended Consequences	213
6.3	Performance Information and Using ‘Bureaucracy’ as an Indicator of Performance	216

6.4	Managing Relations with Aid Agencies with the Aim of Avoiding Risks and Unintended Consequences Arising from Aid Support	218
6.5	The Factors Which May Be a Cause of Risks and Unintended Consequences	221
6.6	The Warning Signs Leading to Potential Unintended Consequences	226
6.7	Arrangements for the Monitoring and Evaluation of the Reform	230
6.8	Summary	231
7	The Responsibilities of the Top Operational Management Official in Public Organisations for the Implementation and Quality Control of PFM/IC	233
7.1	Nominal and Real Responsibility for the Application and Quality Control of PFM/IC	234
7.1.1	The PFM/IC Leadership Application Arrangements	234
7.1.2	The Responsibilities of a State Secretary or Equivalent Before the Application of the PFM/IC Policy	236
7.1.3	The Role and Responsibilities of a State Secretary (or Equivalent) Operating in a Managerial Environment	238
7.1.4	The Specific Financial Responsibilities of a State Secretary with the Implementation of PFM/IC	241
7.1.5	Where No State Secretary Post Exists But Each Department Within a Ministry Is Headed by a 'Director' Who Reports Directly to a Minister	249
7.1.6	The Importance of Good Corporate Governance Arrangements	250
7.1.7	The Relationship Between Line Ministry State Secretaries and the Ministry of Finance State Secretary with the Application of PFM/IC	252
7.1.8	The State Secretary, Internal Audit and Inspection	254
7.2	Summary	255

8	The Role of the Head of Finance and the Finance Department in Line Ministries and Other Public Organisations with the Application of PFM/IC	257
8.1	The Significance of Financial Management	258
8.1.1	Financial Management in Public Organisations	258
8.1.2	Financial Management, Decision Making and the Role of the Head of Finance	260
8.2	Functions of the Head of Finance Prior to the Application of PFM/IC	262
8.2.1	The Background	262
8.2.2	A Summary of the Responsibilities of the Head of Finance Before the Introduction of PFM/IC	263
8.3	The Responsibilities of a Head of Finance with the Introduction of PFM/IC	266
8.3.1	The Changed Background	266
8.3.2	The Key Changes That the Head of Finance Should be Prepared for, Including Support to Managers	269
8.3.3	The Head of Finance and the Development of Policy, Including Securing Short- and Long-Run Financial Resilience	271
8.3.4	Accountability and Transparency	274
8.3.5	Managing Costs	276
8.3.6	The Role of the Head of Finance as a ‘Check’ on Managerial Aspirations and as a Reviewer of the Utilisation of Assets	277
8.3.7	A Summary of the Role of the Head of Finance with the Introduction of PFM/IC	279
8.4	The Head of Finance Role in Developing a Financially Aware Operational Management	280
8.4.1	The Centrality of the Role of Head of Finance	280
8.5	The Training of Heads of Finance	281
8.6	Accrual Accounting and Its Impact upon Financial Management and Financial Reporting	283
8.7	The Organisation of the Finance Function	283
8.8	Costing	285
8.9	The Head of Finance and Strategic and Business Planning and Strategic Financial Planning	288
8.10	Summary	291

Annex 1: The Responsibilities of a Head of Finance in Supporting the Development of a Financially Aware Management	293
Annex 2: Financial Resilience	298
9 The Role of the Department Responsible for Advising on and Securing the Application of PFM/IC	303
9.1 Introduction	304
9.2 Before a Decision Is Made to Introduce the Reform!	305
9.2.1 The Strategic Analytical and Planning Report	307
9.2.2 The Risks with Implementing This Reform	311
9.3 Implementing the Reform	312
9.3.1 Learning from Others	312
9.3.2 The Preparation of an Operational Implementation Policy Paper	314
9.3.3 Actions of the Head of the PFM/IC Department Following the Approval of the Operational Implementation Policy Paper	320
9.4 The Ministry of Finance State Secretary Relations with Individual Ministries	321
9.5 The Experience, Skills and Attributes Required to Build a Successful PFM/IC Application Team Supporting the State Secretary	323
9.6 Achieving Local Ownership of the Reform	325
9.7 The Practical Issues the Head of the PFM/IC ‘Driver’ Department Should Address	326
9.8 Summary	336
10 Achieving the Benefits That Introducing PFM/IC Can Generate and Accounting for the Costs	339
10.1 Management and Policy—The Core Factor in Achieving the Benefits of PFM/IC	340
10.2 The Benefits of the Reform	341
10.2.1 Budgetary Stability	341
10.2.2 The Sources of Benefit Derived from Better Quality Management	342
10.3 Summary on Benefits	354
10.4 The Main Areas of Cost	355
10.5 Summary on Costs	363

11	International Standards of Internal Control Relevant to the Application of PFM/IC	365
11.1	The Implicit Assumptions Contained Within the International Standards of Best Practice (COSO)	367
11.2	Appreciating the Impact of COSO	372
11.2.1	The Standards of COSO	372
11.2.2	COSO and Management	374
11.3	The Five Standards of COSO	375
11.3.1	An Overview	376
11.3.2	The Individual Standards	377
11.4	Summary	412
Annex 1		413
	Examples of Risk Management Statements	413
12	Managing and Controlling Second-Level Organisations: The Responsibilities of the First-Level Organisation	433
12.1	An Overview of the Control of Second-Level Organisations with the Development of PFM/IC	434
12.1.1	The Context for Establishing Second-Level Organisations	434
12.1.2	The Criteria for Establishing Second-Level Organisations	436
12.1.3	Purpose of Establishing Second-Level Organisations and the Problems That Exist	438
12.1.4	The Responsibilities of Controlling Organisation	440
12.1.5	The Information That a Controlling Organisation Should Have	448
12.1.6	Oversight Arrangements by Controlling Organisations: Service-Level Agreements—Examples of Arrangements in Ireland and the Netherlands	448
12.1.7	Arrangements for the Systematic Review of Existence of a Second-Level Organisation: A Netherlands Example	457
12.1.8	Questions to Be Asked About Second-Level Organisations When PFM/IC Is Introduced	458
12.1.9	Questions to Be Asked Where Private Sector Organisations Are Asked to Deliver Public Services	460
12.1.10	An Example of the Risks That Can Exist with Second-Level Organisations	462

12.1.11	Controlling Ministries and Boards for Second-Level Organisations	465
12.1.12	Audit and Second-Level Organisations	467
12.1.13	Using ‘Performance’ as a Basis for Control	469
12.2	Summary of Issues Concerning Second-Level Organisations and PFI-Type Schemes	470
Annex		472
	Irish Government Agency Report Requirements	472
	Irish Government: Model Shareholder Expectation Letter	475
	Financial Performance Measures	479
13	Monitoring the Change from Administration to Management: Demonstrating This Through the Utilisation of a Statement of Internal Control	483
13.1	Reporting on the Quality of Internal Control	484
13.1.1	Management and the Statement of Internal Control	484
13.1.2	The Responsibilities of the Official Preparing This Statement	486
13.1.3	The Benefits of This Statement	487
13.1.4	The Issues That Should Be Covered in the Statement	487
13.1.5	The Role of Audit and This Statement and the Publicity Which Should Be Given	490
13.1.6	Consequential Changes to Facilitate the Development of a Statement of Internal Control	491
13.1.7	Signs of Weaknesses in the Internal Control Arrangements	492
13.1.8	Examples of Statements of Internal Control	496
13.2	Summary	499
Annex:	Example Statements of Internal Control	500
	Example 1: United Kingdom	500
	Example 2: Croatia	513
14	Public Sector Reform, Delegation, and PFM/IC	519
14.1	Public Sector, Including Civil Service Reform, and PFM/IC	520
14.1.1	Introduction	520
14.1.2	The Main Features of Public Management- Oriented Organisations	522

14.1.3	Managing Complex Public Sector Organisations: Whether Delegation Is Appropriate or Not	525
14.2	The Effect of Introducing the Concept of Efficiency and Effectiveness into Public Service Administration	541
14.2.1	The Impact of Introducing Efficiency and Effectiveness into the Managerial Arrangements	541
14.2.2	Achieving Delegation and Managerial Accountability in Practice: The Importance of ‘Trust’ and Other Factors	544
14.2.3	Delegation and Questions About the Activities of the Organisation	549
14.2.4	Professional Experts and Delegation	551
14.3	The SIGMA ‘Principles of Public Administration’	552
14.3.1	The SIGMA Principles and Management	552
14.4	Personnel Management (Human Relations—HR)	553
14.4.1	The Significance of Personnel Management in the PFM/IC Reform	553
14.5	Summary	556
	Annex: SIGMA Principles of Public Administration of Relevance to the Introduction of PFM/IC (An Early Draft of the 2023 Version Which May Be Subject to Change)	557
	Index	567